TENNESSEE CONNECTION · OAK RIDGE, THE "SECRET CITY"

Tennessee helped build the atomic bomb. Oak Ridge — the "Secret City" — was a central site of the Manhattan Project (US.56), enriching the uranium used in the first atomic weapons. At its peak it held about 75,000 workers, many of whom never knew what they were making. Cordell Hull of Pickett County (US.58) helped found the United Nations, and Fort Campbell became home to the 101st Airborne (US.51).

One common workbook designed for learner variability. Every student works toward the same Tennessee standards; supports vary the means, not the goal or the ceiling.

Unit at a Glance

World War II, 1939–1945 — fourteen standards, each built for one 45-minute class period. Every standard runs the same seven-activity cycle, so you always know what comes next.

The fourteen standards

- US.45 Rise and Spread of Fascism, Communism, and Totalitarianism
- US.46 FDR's Response to World Crises
- US.47 U.S. Response to the Holocaust
- US.48 American Entry into World War II
- US.49 WWII Leaders & Key Figures
- US.50 Major WWII Battles: Midway, Iwo Jima, Okinawa & D-Day
- US.51 Special Fighting Forces in WWII
- US.52 Women in World War II
- US.53 African Americans in WWII
- US.54 Japanese American Internment & Korematsu
- US.55 Home Front Mobilization
- US.56 Manhattan Project & Atomic Bomb
- US.57 Yalta and Potsdam Conferences
- US.58 Founding of the United Nations & Cordell Hull

The seven-activity cycle (repeats for every standard)

1. Vocabulary · 2. Vocabulary Studio · 3. Cornell Notes · 4. Close Read · 5. Primary Source (HIPPO) · 6. Practice Quiz · 7. Constructed Response (CER)

Each standard also opens with a warm-up (learning targets, goal, hook, preview) and closes with an exit ticket.

Tennessee Standards & SSP Crosswalk

PROGRESS CHECK	A quick DOK-2/3 check that guides reteach or extend.
EXTENSION	A deeper challenge once the goal is met.

Before You Begin — Set Your Goal

This unit asks one big question: as the United States industrialized, who benefited and who bore the costs? Set a goal, then note what you already know.

Prompt	Your response
My goal for this unit is...
One thing I already know about this era...
One question I want answered...

How to write a strong goal — an example. A strong goal names what you will be able to DO and how you will SHOW it.

Ask yourself: What should I understand by the end of this standard? How will I prove it? What might be hardest for me — and what will I do about it?

Example: “I can explain how economic crisis and fear helped dictators rise to power, and I will show it by writing a claim backed by two specific pieces of evidence.”

Standard US.45 — Rise and Spread of Fascism, Communism, and Totalitarianism

TN Academic Standard US.45: Explain the rise and spread of fascism, communism, and totalitarianism internationally.

LEARNING TARGETS — I can...

- I can explain the rise and spread of fascism, communism, and totalitarianism internationally, including the key characteristics and leaders of each system.

Lenses for this standard: History · Politics/Government

CORE PATH — the same for every student

Same rigor for everyone: analyze the sources and vocabulary, then show what you learned on the Practice Quiz and the CER.

Check yourself against the learning targets on the Cornell Notes page.

SET YOUR GOAL (self-direction)

My goal for this standard — what will I be able to do, and how will I show it?

HOOK — read before you dig in

In barely twenty years, a handful of leaders convinced whole nations to trade freedom for the promise of order — and the world slid toward its deadliest war. How does that happen? As you read, watch for the fear, anger, and broken promises that let dictators rise.

ACTIVATE — what do you already know or wonder?

Think about it, then jot a few notes in your notebook: what do you already know, and what do you wonder about this standard? You will come back to it.

PREVIEW & PREDICT

Which learning target will be hardest, and why? Connect it to the unit's big question: how did the war change America at home and abroad, and who sacrificed even while excluded?

Activity 1 — Vocabulary (Part A: Reference / Word Bank) — US.45 ~10 min

Use this word bank throughout the standard. The Spanish column supports access, not translation of assessment.

Term	Student-friendly meaning	Spanish
Fascism	An authoritarian political ideology that emphasizes extreme nationalism, militarism, totalitarian control, and a dictatorial leader. Suppresses opposition and glorifies the state above individual rights.	Fascismo
Totalitarianism	A system of government where the state controls every aspect of public and private life, using propaganda, secret police, and terror to eliminate opposition.	Totalitarismo
Communism	A political and economic system in which the state owns property and the means of production in the name of the working class; in the 20th century it took the form of one-party dictatorship under leaders like...	Comunismo
Adolf Hitler	Nazi dictator of Germany (1933-1945) who led Germany into World War II and orchestrated the Holocaust, resulting in the deaths of 6 million Jews and millions of others.	Adolf Hitler
Benito Mussolini	Fascist dictator of Italy (1922-1943) who created the first fascist state, formed the Axis alliance with Hitler, and led Italy into World War II.	Benito Mussolini
Joseph Stalin	Communist dictator of the Soviet Union (1924-1953) who ruled through terror, forced collectivization, and purges, resulting in millions of deaths.	Joseph Stalin

Summary — In your own words (2-3 sentences)

PROGRESS CHECK · one question

How did economic crisis and political instability enable the rise of totalitarian regimes in Italy, Germany, and the Soviet Union?

- A. The Great Depression, post-WWI disappointment, and political chaos created conditions where people accepted radical solutions and strong leaders promising stability
- B. Economic prosperity led people to seek stronger government control, although this view has been largely discredited by scholars, which does not align with the documented historical record
- C. Totalitarian regimes rose during periods of peace and prosperity, despite the fact that multiple sources contradict this view, which does not align with the documented historical record
- D. Democratic governments actively promoted totalitarianism, which does not align with the documented historical record, but the historical evidence paints a more nuanced picture

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.45 ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

Key terms first: Fascism, Totalitarianism. Read once for the gist, then again for evidence.

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a time

Key Characteristics of Fascism

Fascism is characterized by ultranationalism (extreme devotion to nation above individual rights), authoritarian leadership with dictatorial power concentrated in a single leader (Führer, Duce), and militarism glorifying war and aggressive expansion. Fascists violently opposed communism and socialism, used mass mobilization through rallies and propaganda, and created a cult of personality around their leaders. They also scapegoated minority groups for national problems while maintaining a corporate state with government control of the economy.

Fundamental Tenets of Communism

Communism is based on class struggle as the driving force of history, requiring a proletarian revolution where the working class overthrows capitalism. It promotes collective ownership with state control of production and property, aiming for a classless society. Communists viewed their revolution as an international movement, led by a vanguard Communist Party governing on behalf of workers. The system relies on central planning where government directs all economic activity, and historically promoted atheism, opposing organized religion.

Totalitarianism in Italy, Germany, and Soviet Union

Totalitarianism is a political system where government exercises complete control over all public and private life. In Italy, Benito Mussolini ("Il Duce") established fascist dictatorship (1922-1943), using Blackshirts to intimidate opponents. In the Soviet Union, Joseph Stalin consolidated power after Lenin's death, implementing Five-Year Plans, forced collectivization causing famine, and the Great Purge eliminating millions. In Germany, Adolf Hitler ("Führer") established Nazi dictatorship (1933-1945), promoting Aryan supremacy and anti-Semitism, using the Gestapo secret police, and seeking "Lebensraum" through territorial expansion.

Factors Facilitating International Spread

Common factors enabling totalitarianism included the Great Depression creating conditions for radical solutions, political instability with weak democratic governments, social upheaval from war and revolution, charismatic leaders promising simple solutions, and mass communication enabling propaganda. The League of Nations' weakness, Western appeasement policies, and economic nationalism allowed aggression to go unchallenged. German rearmament, Italian conquest of Ethiopia, and Japanese expansion in Asia demonstrated international system breakdown.

CLOSE-READ EVIDENCE LAB — for each question: quote the EVIDENCE from the passage above, then write YOUR ANSWER (or answer aloud / diagram it).

HIPPO SUPPORTS — analyzing the source · US.45

Optional — use these to complete your HIPPO analysis. Your teacher may print this back page or leave it off.

Guiding questions

- H — Historical context: What was happening in the world when this was made?
- I — Intended audience: Who was meant to see or obey it?
- P — Purpose: Why did the creator make it? What did they want to happen?
- P — Point of view: Whose side does it show? Whose voice is missing?
- O — Outside connection: What have we studied that connects to this?

SUPPORT OPTION

Sentence frame: This source shows _____ because it _____, which reveals _____.

Model analysis (example)

H: Taken in 1935 as the Nazi regime consolidated power. I: Meant for the German public, to build loyalty and fear. P: Propaganda — to project unity, order, and strength. POV: It shows the regime's view; the persecuted are absent. O: Connects to how totalitarian states used mass media to control people.

Try it — sourcing warm-up

Before you fill in HIPPO on the front, answer these in one line each:

- Who made this source, and when?
- What did they want the viewer to think or feel?
- How does that change how much you trust it?

WRITING SUPPORTS — Constructed Response (CER) • US.45

Optional — use these to plan and write your CER. Your teacher may print this back page or leave it off; the goal on the front never changes.

Sentence stems

- Claim: “One major cause of _____ was _____.” / “_____ happened mainly because _____.”
- Evidence: “According to the source, _____.” / “For example, _____ shows that _____.”
- Reasoning: “This evidence proves _____ because _____.” / “This matters because _____.”
- Go further: “Although some might say _____, the stronger evidence shows _____.”

Model response (example)

Claim: Economic crisis and fear allowed dictators to rise in the 1930s. Evidence: The Great Depression caused mass unemployment in Germany, and Hitler promised jobs and national pride. Reasoning: When people are desperate and afraid, they may accept a strongman who promises order — which is how the Nazi dictatorship gained power.

CER rubric — in your own words

- Claim — I answer the question in one clear sentence.
- Evidence — I use two specific facts from the sources.
- Reasoning — I explain HOW my evidence proves my claim.
- Conventions — I write in complete sentences a reader can follow.

PROGRESS CHECK · one question

How did the Atlantic Charter establish principles for the post-war international order?

- A. It focused only on immediate military strategy, yet the available evidence points to a different conclusion, which contradicts the primary source evidence from this era
- B. It established principles including self-determination, free trade, collective security, and disarmament that became the foundation for the United Nations and post-war international law
- C. It divided the world into American and British spheres of influence, despite the fact that multiple sources contradict this view, but closer analysis reveals a more complicated historical reality
- D. It had no lasting impact on international relations, though this interpretation lacks supporting historical evidence, although historical sources do not support this conclusion

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.46 ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

Key terms first: Quarantine Speech, Four Freedoms Speech. Read once for the gist, then again for evidence.

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a time

Quarantine Speech (October 5, 1937)

As Japan invaded China and European tensions grew, Roosevelt faced strong isolationist sentiment reflected in the Neutrality Acts (1935-1937). In his Quarantine Speech, FDR compared aggressor nations to a disease requiring quarantine, suggesting peace-loving nations should cooperate against aggressors. This was the first major departure from strict isolationism, laying groundwork for later interventionist policies, though public reaction was mixed and no immediate policy changes resulted.

Four Freedoms Speech (January 6, 1941)

Roosevelt outlined four essential freedoms that should exist "everywhere in the world": Freedom of Speech and Expression, Freedom of Worship, Freedom from Want (economic security), and Freedom from Fear (reduction of armaments). These freedoms provided moral justification for U.S. involvement in war, defined what America would fight for, and outlined goals for post-war international order. The Four Freedoms contrasted democratic values with fascist oppression and later influenced the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Atlantic Charter (August 14, 1941)

Meeting secretly with Winston Churchill off Newfoundland, Roosevelt established war aims and post-war principles: no territorial aggrandizement, self-determination for peoples, economic cooperation and free trade, freedom of the seas, disarmament after war, and collective security through international organization. The Charter became the foundation for the United Nations, encouraged decolonization movements, and established precedents for international human rights law.

Lend-Lease Act (March 11, 1941)

The Lend-Lease Act allowed the U.S. to provide military equipment to Britain without requiring immediate payment, circumventing neutrality while making America the "Arsenal of Democracy." Eventually totaling $50 billion, aid went primarily to Britain (60%), Soviet Union (20%), and China. The program enabled British survival, supported Soviet resistance to German invasion, and stimulated U.S. industrial production while effectively ending true American neutrality.

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.47 ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

Key terms first: Holocaust, Nuremberg Laws (1935). Read once for the gist, then again for evidence.

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a time

U.S. Response Before the War

The National Origins Act (1924) limited immigration from Eastern and Southern Europe where most Jews lived. The quota system severely restricted Jewish immigration, and U.S. consuls often denied visas. The St. Louis incident (1939) saw a ship carrying 937 Jewish refugees turned away from U.S. ports. The Evian Conference (1938) failed to increase refugee admissions. American anti-Semitism, isolationism, economic concerns during the Depression, and security fears all limited response. The War Refugee Board wasn't created until 1944.

Liberation of Concentration Camps

Soviet forces liberated Majdanek (1944) and Auschwitz (1945), while U.S. forces liberated Buchenwald, Dachau, and Mauthausen. American soldiers were unprepared for the extent of Nazi atrocities. Military photographers documented evidence while medical personnel treated survivors. The Army provided food, medical care, and shelter, forced local German civilians to view camps, and established displaced persons camps. Liberation footage shocked the American public and provided evidence for the Nuremberg trials.

Post-War Immigration of Holocaust Survivors

The Displaced Persons Act (1948) initially admitted 205,000 displaced persons but gave preference to Baltic refugees over Jews. Amendments in 1950 expanded the program, eventually admitting about 80,000 Jewish survivors. Survivors faced bureaucratic delays, quota limitations, and anti-Semitic opposition. Jewish organizations provided financial and social support, helping survivors integrate into American society, rebuild careers, and preserve Holocaust memory through testimonies.

Moral and Ethical Implications (Honors)

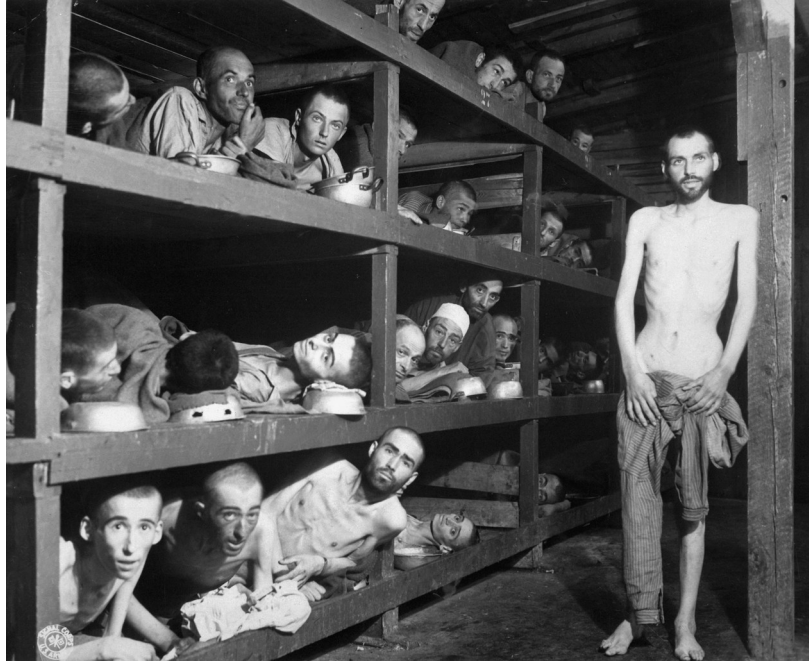

Kristallnacht (November 9-10, 1938) was a coordinated Nazi attack on Jewish businesses and synagogues. The U.S. recalled its ambassador and extended tourist visas but maintained immigration quotas. This raises questions about whether the U.S. should have done more to help Jewish refugees, the responsibility of bystander nations during genocide, and the tension between moral obligations and national security concerns. These events contributed to the development of genocide prevention and international human rights law.

- Go further: “Although some might say _____, the stronger evidence shows _____.”

Model response (example)

Claim: The U.S. response to the Holocaust shifted from limited action before the war, to direct liberation during it, to gradual acceptance of survivors afterward. Evidence: Before the war strict immigration quotas kept many Jewish refugees out (the SS St. Louis was turned away in 1939); during the war U.S. troops liberated camps such as Buchenwald in 1945. Reasoning: This shows the U.S. did little to rescue Jews early but confronted the Holocaust once its armies reached the camps, and later loosened policy to admit survivors.

EXIT TICKET — before you leave [item us47-q3 · DOK 2 · pre-field-test]

How did American forces respond when they liberated Nazi concentration camps, and what impact did this have on public awareness?

- A. Shocked soldiers provided immediate aid, documented evidence, and forced German civilians to view the camps; footage broadcast to America created lasting awareness and moral awakening
- B. They had been prepared for what they found, which contradicts the primary source evidence from this era, but the historical evidence paints a more nuanced picture
- C. Liberation had no impact on public awareness, which ignores key developments that shaped the outcome, which contradicts the primary source evidence from this era
- D. American forces avoided the concentration camps, but contemporary accounts suggest a different explanation and oversimplifies the complex factors at work during this period

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.48 ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

Key terms first: Pearl Harbor, Hideki Tojo. Read once for the gist, then again for evidence.

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a time

Factors in the European Theater

German U-boats attacked U.S. ships carrying Lend-Lease supplies, leading to an undeclared naval war with the U.S. Navy escorting convoys and engaging German submarines. The Atlantic Charter created moral and strategic partnership with Britain. The Destroyer Deal exchanged U.S. destroyers for British bases, and U.S. forces occupied Iceland to prevent German control. These actions increasingly moved America toward war despite isolationist opposition.

Factors in the Pacific Theater

Japan conquered much of China and Southeast Asia, threatening U.S. territories and interests. In response, the U.S. imposed economic sanctions including an oil embargo and froze Japanese assets (July 1941). The Hull Note demanded Japanese withdrawal from China and Indochina, but negotiations failed to resolve differences. Japan's military leaders saw war with America as inevitable given the economic pressure.

Attack on Pearl Harbor (December 7, 1941)

Japan planned to eliminate the U.S. Pacific Fleet to prevent interference with expansion. Six aircraft carriers launched 353 planes in two waves on Sunday morning when defenses were relaxed. The attack sank or damaged 8 battleships, destroyed 188 planes, and killed 2,403 Americans. Intelligence failures left U.S. forces completely unprepared. Roosevelt's "Date of Infamy" speech galvanized the nation, and Congress declared war with only one dissenting vote.

Consequences of American Entry

Pearl Harbor destroyed isolationist opposition and unified American public opinion. Germany and Italy declared war on the U.S. (December 11), making the conflict worldwide. Domestically, war ended the Great Depression and created full employment, while the government gained unprecedented powers. Internationally, U.S. entry provided resources necessary to defeat the Axis, established America as the dominant world power, and led to the creation of the United Nations.

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.49 ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

Key terms first: Dwight D. Eisenhower, Adolf Hitler. Read once for the gist, then again for evidence.

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a time

Allied Political Leaders

Winston Churchill served as British Prime Minister (1940-1945), inspiring British resistance during the Battle of Britain and partnering with FDR on the Atlantic Charter. Franklin D. Roosevelt led America as President, implementing Lend-Lease, maintaining the Grand Alliance with Churchill and Stalin, and supporting the "Europe First" strategy. Joseph Stalin defended the Soviet Union against German invasion, achieved victory at Stalingrad, and led the massive Soviet advance that captured Berlin. Harry S. Truman became President in 1945, making the atomic bomb decision and overseeing Japanese surrender.

Allied Military Leaders

Dwight D. Eisenhower served as Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, planning D-Day and successfully managing the multinational Allied command. Douglas MacArthur commanded Allied forces in the Southwest Pacific, developing the island-hopping strategy and accepting Japanese surrender aboard USS Missouri. George C. Marshall, as Army Chief of Staff, organized the expansion of the U.S. Army from 200,000 to 8 million, developed the "Europe First" strategy, and coordinated global logistics.

Axis Leaders

Adolf Hitler, as Führer of Nazi Germany, developed blitzkrieg tactics, launched Operation Barbarossa against the Soviet Union, and orchestrated the Holocaust before committing suicide as Berlin fell. Benito Mussolini established fascist Italy and formed the Axis alliance, but Italian military failures required German rescue before he was captured and executed by partisans. Hideki Tojo, Japanese Prime Minister, authorized the Pearl Harbor attack and led Japan's Pacific conquest before being executed as a war criminal.

Comparing Leadership Approaches

Churchill provided inspirational leadership through rhetoric and determination. Eisenhower excelled at diplomatic coalition management. Hitler's dictatorial style led to strategic mistakes like fighting a two-front war. MacArthur was dramatic and media-conscious. Marshall demonstrated exceptional organizational ability. Roosevelt and Churchill maintained a "special relationship" while managing the difficult alliance with Stalin. The contrast between Allied cooperation and Axis failures in coordination contributed significantly to the war's outcome.

PROGRESS CHECK · one question

How did geographic features of the Pacific islands affect American military strategy in battles like Midway and Iwo Jima?

- A. Geography had no effect on Pacific strategy, though this interpretation lacks supporting historical evidence, although historical sources do not support this conclusion
- B. Midway's central location made it strategically vital, while Iwo Jima's volcanic terrain created natural fortifications requiring costly direct assault to secure airfields needed for bombing Japan
- C. All Pacific islands were geographically identical, which does not reflect the consensus among historians, but the historical evidence paints a more nuanced picture and does not reflect the scholarly consensus on this topic
- D. American forces avoided geographic challenges entirely, which does not align with the documented historical record, and this view has been largely revised by modern historical research

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.50 ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

Key terms first: D-Day (Normandy Invasion), Battle of Midway. Read once for the gist, then again for evidence.

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a time

Battle of Midway (June 1942)

Midway Atoll's strategic location in the central Pacific made it crucial for both Japanese expansion and American defense. U.S. codebreakers broke Japanese naval codes, revealing attack plans. American carriers ambushed the Japanese fleet, sinking four aircraft carriers and destroying Japan's offensive capability. This "Miracle at Midway" shifted the Pacific war's momentum permanently to the Allies, demonstrating the critical importance of intelligence in modern warfare.

Battle of Iwo Jima (February-March 1945)

Iwo Jima's volcanic terrain created natural fortifications that Japanese defenders exploited through an extensive tunnel system. The island's airfields were needed for emergency landings by B-29 bombers attacking Japan and for fighter escorts. Despite knowing the location of Japanese defenses, Marines suffered nearly 7,000 killed and 20,000 wounded in 36 days of fighting. The iconic flag raising on Mount Suribachi became a symbol of American determination.

Battle of Okinawa (April-June 1945)

Okinawa's proximity to Japan (340 miles) made it essential as a staging base for invasion. The 82-day battle was the bloodiest Pacific campaign, with over 12,000 Americans killed and 110,000 Japanese military deaths. Mass kamikaze attacks damaged or sank hundreds of ships. The horrific casualties influenced American decisions about invading Japan versus using atomic weapons, as projected invasion casualties ran into the hundreds of thousands.

D-Day: Normandy Invasion (June 6, 1944)

The Normandy coast was chosen for its beaches suitable for landing craft, proximity to English ports, and weaker defenses than Pas-de-Calais. Allied deception operations convinced Germans the main attack would come elsewhere. Despite heavy casualties at Omaha Beach, Allied forces established beachheads and broke through German defenses. The largest amphibious invasion in history required unprecedented coordination of land, sea, and air forces, opening the Western Front that would ultimately liberate Western Europe.

CLOSE-READ EVIDENCE LAB — for each question: quote the EVIDENCE from the passage above, then write YOUR ANSWER (or answer aloud / diagram it).

Geographer's Lens — US.50 ~12 min

Geographers don't just find places — they explain how WHERE shapes WHAT happens. Work these like a geographer. Built on the Five Themes of Geography · C3 Dimension 2 · SSP.06 (spatial reasoning).

THE PLACES — then explain why geography put them there

World War II was fought across two enormous theaters. Use the list below to map the major battles in the Pacific and in Europe, then explain the island-hopping and second-front patterns.

Place	Where	What happened (given)	Why HERE? (your analysis)
Midway	Central Pacific	1942 naval battle — the turning point in the Pacific	_____
Iwo Jima	Pacific (near Japan)	1945 island-hopping battle toward the Japanese mainland	_____
Okinawa	Pacific (near Japan)	1945 — the last major island before Japan	_____
Normandy (D-Day)	France, Western Europe	1944 Allied invasion — the second front in Europe	_____

MOVEMENT & REGION — what's the spatial pattern?

In 1–2 sentences: is this a movement, a cluster, or a whole region? Name the direction or shape it takes on a map.

GEOGRAPHY AS A FORCE — how did location shape the outcome?

How did geography change WHAT happened — who was affected, how far or fast it spread, or who was left out? Use one place above as your evidence.

PROGRESS CHECK · one question

Why is the service of the 442nd Regimental Combat Team particularly significant given the internment of Japanese Americans?

- A. Their service had no connection to internment policies, but the historical record tells a more complex story, and this view has been largely revised by modern historical research
- B. The 442nd was composed of non-Japanese American soldiers, but this fails to account for the broader historical context, but the historical evidence paints a more nuanced picture
- C. Japanese American soldiers volunteered to fight for a country that imprisoned their families, becoming the most decorated unit of their size while proving their loyalty despite profound injustice
- D. They served only in the Pacific theater, but this fails to account for the broader historical context and does not reflect the scholarly consensus on this topic, which contradicts the primary source evidence from this era

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.51 ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

Key terms first: Tuskegee Airmen, 442nd Regimental Combat Team. Read once for the gist, then again for evidence.

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a time

Tuskegee Airmen

The Tuskegee Airmen were the first African American military aviators in the U.S. Armed Forces. Trained at Tuskegee Army Air Field in Alabama, the 332nd Fighter Group flew over 15,000 sorties in Europe and North Africa. They earned over 150 Distinguished Flying Crosses and a Presidential Unit Citation. Despite facing racism and segregation within the military, they compiled an outstanding combat record, helping to pave the way for the desegregation of the armed forces in 1948.

442nd Regimental Combat Team

The 442nd was composed almost entirely of Japanese American volunteers, many of whose families were confined in internment camps. Fighting in Europe, they became the most decorated unit of their size in U.S. military history, earning over 18,000 individual decorations including 21 Medals of Honor. Their motto "Go for Broke" reflected their determination to prove their loyalty to America despite the government's unjust treatment of their families.

101st Airborne Division

The "Screaming Eagles" of the 101st Airborne Division parachuted into Normandy on D-Day, June 6, 1944, securing key bridges and crossroads behind enemy lines to support the beach landings. They later defended Bastogne during the Battle of the Bulge, where Acting Commander General Anthony McAuliffe famously replied "Nuts!" to a German surrender demand. Their elite training and courage under fire made them one of the most celebrated units in American military history.

Navajo Code Talkers

Navajo Marines developed an unbreakable military code based on their native language, which had no written form and was virtually unknown outside the Navajo Nation. Code Talkers served in every major Marine operation in the Pacific from 1942-1945, transmitting battlefield communications that the Japanese never deciphered. Their contributions were so vital that commanders credited them with the success at Iwo Jima. Their service remained classified until 1968 and was formally recognized with Congressional Gold Medals in 2001.

Individual Sacrifice and Legacy

These special fighting forces demonstrated extraordinary courage while often fighting two wars—one against foreign enemies and another against discrimination at home. Their sacrifices challenged racial prejudices, proved that patriotism transcended race and ethnicity, and contributed to post-war civil rights advances. Veterans of these units became leaders in their communities and advocates for equality, using their military records to demand the rights they had fought to defend.

[DOK 2 · item us51-q3 · pre-field-test]

How did the Navajo Code Talkers use their cultural heritage to create an unbreakable military communication system?

- A. They developed a code based on the Navajo language, which had no written form and was unknown to the enemy, providing unbreakable battlefield communications throughout the Pacific war
- B. The code was eventually broken by the Japanese, but the historical record tells a more complex story and does not reflect the scholarly consensus on this topic
- C. They used standard military codes translated into Navajo, although this view has been largely discredited by scholars, but contemporary accounts and primary sources suggest otherwise
- D. Code Talkers served only in a single battle, which ignores key developments that shaped the outcome, which ignores significant political and cultural developments of the era

[DOK 2 · item q-us52-dok2-1 · pre-field-test]

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a time

Factors Leading to Women's Participation

With 16 million men serving in the armed forces, a massive labor shortage emerged as war production required doubling the manufacturing workforce. Government campaigns like "Rosie the Riveter" recruited women, while economic necessity pushed many families to rely on women's income. Women in the workforce grew from 12 million (1940) to 20 million (1945), comprising 36% of the civilian workforce. Women made up 65% of aircraft industry workers by war's end.

Challenges and Opportunities

Women faced discrimination including lower pay (about 65% of men's wages), dangerous conditions, long hours, and inadequate facilities. Social challenges included limited childcare, expectations to maintain domestic duties, and criticism for abandoning traditional roles. However, women gained economic independence, learned technical skills, some achieved supervisory positions, and military service provided professional training in communications, mechanics, and aviation.

Impact on Production and Economy

Women built bombers, fighters, and transport planes; constructed Liberty ships; manufactured ammunition and explosives; and assembled radios and radar equipment. Women's entry helped achieve record production levels—296,000 aircraft, 86,000 tanks, 2.3 million trucks. This contribution was essential to Allied victory, demonstrating women's capabilities in technical and leadership roles previously reserved for men.

Long-term Effects on Society

After the war, many women were laid off to make room for returning veterans, and social pressure emphasized homemaking and motherhood. However, women's labor force participation never returned to pre-war levels. The experience provided foundation for the women's rights movement of the 1960s-70s, established precedents for equal employment opportunities, and created pathways for women in previously male professions. Military services became permanent parts of armed forces.

Model response (example)

Claim: World War II brought large numbers of women into the workforce and military, changing American society. Evidence: Women took defense-industry jobs such as building aircraft (as at the Vultee plant in Nashville), and hundreds of thousands served in units like the WACs and WAVES. Reasoning: This showed women could do jobs once reserved for men and, though many left work after the war, it laid groundwork for later expansion of women's roles.

EXIT TICKET — before you leave [item us52-q1 · DOK 2 · pre-field-test]What factors led to the massive entry of women into the workforce and armed forces during WWII?

- Women chose to work for personal fulfillment alone, but the historical record tells a more complex story, but the historical evidence paints a more nuanced picture and oversimplifies the complex factors at work during this period
- The labor shortage from 16 million men in military service, government recruitment campaigns like "Rosie the Riveter," war production demands, and family economic necessity drove women into the workforce
- Women were forced into work against their will, which contradicts the primary source evidence from this era, which ignores significant political and cultural developments of the era
- Only a small number of women entered the workforce, yet the available evidence points to a different conclusion and fails to account for key developments in the broader context

Standard US.53 — African Americans in WWII

TN Academic Standard US.53: Examine the impact of World War II on economic and social conditions for African Americans, including the Fair Employment Practices Committee and the eventual integration of the armed forces by President Harry S. Truman. (TCA)

LEARNING TARGETS — I can...

- I can examine the impact of World War II on economic and social conditions for African Americans, including the Fair Employment Practices Committee and the eventual integration of the armed forces by President Truman.

Lenses for this standard: History · Culture · Economics · Tennessee Connection

CORE PATH — the same for every student

Same rigor for everyone: analyze the sources and vocabulary, then show what you learned on the Practice Quiz and the CER.

★ Tennessee Connection

African Americans in Tennessee contributed significantly to the war effort despite facing segregation. The Fair Employment Practices Committee impacted Tennessee war industries, and African American soldiers from Tennessee served in segregated units. After the war, returning Black veterans became leaders in Tennessee's civil rights movement.

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.53 ⌚ ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

Key terms first: Executive Order 8802, Double V Campaign. Read once for the gist, then again for evidence.

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a timeSecond Great Migration and Economic Opportunities

1.5 million African Americans moved North and West during the 1940s to cities like Detroit, Chicago, and Los Angeles. Defense industries offered higher wages than Southern agriculture, and average Black family income doubled during the war. However, discrimination persisted—many employers refused to hire African Americans, job segregation confined Black workers to lowest-paying positions, and limited advancement opportunities existed.

Double V Campaign and Wartime Experiences

The Pittsburgh Courier promoted the "Double V" campaign—victory against fascism abroad and racism at home. One million African Americans served in segregated armed forces, facing prejudice and unequal treatment even while fighting for democracy. NAACP membership grew from 50,000 to 450,000 during the war. War rhetoric about democracy and freedom raised consciousness about civil rights contradictions in American society.

Fair Employment Practices Committee (FEPC)

A. Philip Randolph threatened a 100,000-person march on Washington, pressuring FDR to issue Executive Order 8802 (June 25, 1941) creating the FEPC. The committee investigated discrimination complaints from defense workers and held public hearings exposing discriminatory practices. Though it could only make recommendations without enforcement power, the FEPC established the principle of federal intervention in employment discrimination and laid groundwork for later civil rights agencies.

Integration of Armed Forces

Executive Order 9801 (1948) by President Truman ordered desegregation of the armed forces, citing merit and fairness. Implementation was gradual but historic, representing the first major federal civil rights action of the post-war era. The order built on WWII service records of units like the Tuskegee Airmen and 761st Tank Battalion, which had proven African American military capability. Military integration became a model for later civilian desegregation efforts.

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.54 ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

Key terms first: Japanese Internment, Korematsu v. United States. Read once for the gist, then again for evidence.

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a time

Executive Order 9066 and Internment

Following Pearl Harbor, Executive Order 9066 (February 1942) authorized removal of persons from designated military areas, leading to internment of approximately 120,000 Japanese Americans—two-thirds of whom were U.S. citizens. Families were forced to abandon homes, businesses, and property, often selling possessions at severe losses. They were transported to remote internment camps surrounded by barbed wire and guard towers, losing their civil liberties based solely on ancestry.

Constitutional Issues

Internment violated fundamental constitutional principles: due process (no individual hearings or evidence of disloyalty), equal protection (restrictive racial classification treating all Japanese Americans as suspects), and arguably habeas corpus (detention without charges). No similar mass detention was imposed on German or Italian Americans, highlighting the racial basis of the policy. Civil liberties groups protested, but wartime hysteria and racism overcame constitutional protections.

Korematsu v. United States (1944)

Fred Korematsu refused to report for internment and was arrested. The Supreme Court upheld the exclusion order 6-3, ruling that wartime necessity justified the racial classification. Justice Frank Murphy's dissent called the decision "legalization of racism." The decision was widely criticized and formally repudiated decades later. In 1983, Korematsu's conviction was vacated after evidence emerged that the government had suppressed evidence contradicting military necessity claims.

Impact and Historical Lessons

Internees lost an estimated $400 million in property and suffered lasting psychological trauma. The Civil Liberties Act of 1988 formally apologized and provided $20,000 reparations to surviving internees. Historical lessons emphasize the danger of racial profiling during wartime, the importance of judicial review protecting civil liberties, and how fear can override constitutional protections. The internment serves as a cautionary example still invoked in contemporary civil liberties debates.

Guiding questions

- H — Historical context: What was happening in the world when this was made?
- I — Intended audience: Who was meant to see or obey it?
- P — Purpose: Why did the creator make it? What did they want to happen?
- P — Point of view: Whose side does it show? Whose voice is missing?
- O — Outside connection: What have we studied that connects to this?

SUPPORT OPTION

Sentence frame: This source shows _____ because it _____, which reveals _____.

Model analysis (example)

H: Photographed May 8, 1942, in Hayward, California, as the Mochida family awaited forced removal to an internment camp after Executive Order 9066. I: Taken for a U.S. government agency to document the removal; many of Lange's images were withheld at the time. P: To officially record the "evacuation"; Lange used it to quietly show the human cost. POV: Sympathetic to the interned families; the government framed removal as military necessity. O: Connects to Executive Order 9066 and to the Korematsu v. United States decision.

Try it — sourcing warm-up

Before you fill in HIPPO on the front, answer these in one line each:

- Who made this source, and when?
- What did they want the viewer to think or feel?
- How does that change how much you trust it?

Activity 6 — Core Application: Practice Quiz — US.54 ~8 minRESPONSE CHOICE

[DOK 2 · item q-us54-dok2-2 · pre-field-test]

What were conditions like in Japanese American internment camps?

- A. Harsh: overcrowded barracks, inadequate sanitation, extreme weather, barbed wire, armed guards
- B. Upheld internment based on race over constitutional rights; later overturned as based on lies
- C. FDR's order authorizing military to relocate Japanese Americans to internment camps
- D. Refused to report for internment; arrested and appealed to Supreme Court claiming constitutional violation

[DOK 2 · item us-58-x014 · pre-field-test]

The Supreme Court's Korematsu v. United States (1944) ruling upholding Japanese internment is significant because —

- A. It was immediately overturned by the companion Endo decision that ordered the release of loyal Japanese Americans
- B. It upheld the worst racial civil liberties violation of the 20th century, allowing national security claims to justify racial categorization
- C. It was a 5-4 decision that narrowly failed to become a landmark expansion of constitutional civil liberties protections
- D. It established strict constitutional protections against all forms of racial discrimination by the government

[DOK 3 · item u1-us54-dok3-tc · pre-field-test]

How did Executive Order 9066 violate constitutional principles of due process and equal protection?

- A. It followed all constitutional procedures, although historical sources do not support this conclusion, though this interpretation lacks supporting historical evidence, but the historical evidence paints a more nuanced picture
- B. It denied due process by detaining people without individual hearings or evidence, and violated equal protection by targeting Japanese Americans while not similarly treating German or Italian Americans
- C. It only affected non-citizens, but the historical record tells a more complex story, but closer analysis reveals a more complicated historical reality, although historical sources do not support this conclusion
- D. The Constitution does not protect against internment, which does not align with the documented historical record, which ignores significant political and cultural developments of the era

- Reasoning: “This evidence proves _____ because _____.” / “This matters because _____.”
- Go further: “Although some might say _____, the stronger evidence shows _____.”

Model response (example)

Claim: The internment of Japanese Americans violated constitutional rights in the name of wartime security. Evidence: Executive Order 9066 (1942) forced about 120,000 Japanese Americans — most of them U.S. citizens — into camps, and in Korematsu v. United States (1944) the Supreme Court upheld the removal. Reasoning: This shows how fear and prejudice led the government to suspend citizens' rights, a decision later condemned and formally apologized for in 1988.

EXIT TICKET — before you leave [item us54-q1 · DOK 2 · pre-field-test]What factors led to the decision to intern Japanese Americans after Pearl Harbor?

- Evidence of widespread Japanese American disloyalty, yet the available evidence points to a different conclusion and does not reflect the scholarly consensus on this topic
- Japanese Americans requested internment for protection, but this fails to account for the broader historical context, which ignores significant political and cultural developments of the era
- Only non-citizens were interned, which ignores key developments that shaped the outcome, but the historical evidence paints a more nuanced picture, although historical sources do not support this conclusion
- Wartime hysteria, racial prejudice, economic competition from Japanese American businesses, and exaggerated military necessity claims combined to overcome constitutional protections

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.55 ⌚ ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

Key terms first: Rationing, War Bonds. Read once for the gist, then again for evidence.

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a timeRationing and Conservation

Ration books with coupons controlled civilian access to gasoline, tires, sugar, meat, coffee, and other commodities. This ensured military supplies while distributing scarce goods fairly. Victory gardens encouraged citizens to grow their own vegetables, while scrap drives collected metal, rubber, and other materials. These programs fostered civilian investment in the war effort and created shared sacrifice that built national unity.

War Bonds and Propaganda

Liberty and Victory bonds financed the war while giving civilians a direct stake in victory. Bond drives featured celebrities and patriotic appeals, raising billions of dollars. The Office of War Information coordinated propaganda through films, posters, and radio, boosting morale and labor recruitment. Propaganda portrayed the enemy as evil while celebrating American values and workers' contributions.

Migration, Factory Conversion, and Bracero Program

Millions migrated to defense industry centers, creating housing shortages and demographic shifts that reshaped American cities. Auto plants converted to tank and aircraft factories through rapid retooling that enabled massive production increases. The Bracero Program (1942) brought contract labor from Mexico to fill agricultural shortages, providing economic benefits while creating exploitation issues that would persist for decades.

Tennessee's Wartime Role

Tennessee hosted significant wartime facilities including POW camps that housed Axis prisoners, providing labor for local agriculture and industry. Camp Forrest and other installations trained troops and processed prisoners. Most significantly, Oak Ridge was secretly built to enrich uranium for the Manhattan Project, making Tennessee crucial to developing the atomic bomb. These facilities transformed Tennessee's economy and population.

PROGRESS CHECK · one question

What factors influenced President Truman's decision to use atomic weapons against Japan?

- A. Truman made the decision without considering alternatives, which does not align with the documented historical record, although historical sources do not support this conclusion
- B. Only military factors were considered, but this fails to account for the broader historical context, which represents a common misconception about this historical period
- C. Truman opposed using the bombs, but this fails to account for the broader historical context, which does not align with the documented historical record
- D. Projected invasion casualties based on Okinawa, desire to end the war quickly, demonstrating power to the Soviet Union, and Japanese refusal to surrender all influenced the decision

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.56 ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

Key terms first: Manhattan Project, Atomic Bomb. Read once for the gist, then again for evidence.

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a time

Oak Ridge, Tennessee Selection

Oak Ridge was selected for uranium enrichment because of its remote location providing security isolation, abundant electrical power from TVA, good transportation access, and available land. The "Secret City" grew to 75,000 residents, most unaware of their work's purpose. Oak Ridge produced enriched uranium for the "Little Boy" bomb dropped on Hiroshima, making Tennessee crucial to the atomic bomb's development.

Manhattan Project Overview

The secret multi-site program included Los Alamos (weapon design), Oak Ridge (uranium enrichment), and Hanford (plutonium production). Led by General Leslie Groves and scientist J. Robert Oppenheimer, the project employed over 125,000 people and cost nearly $2 billion. The Trinity test (July 16, 1945) successfully demonstrated the first nuclear explosion in New Mexico, proving the concept worked.

Rationale for Using Atomic Weapons

President Truman authorized atomic bombs to end the war quickly, avoiding a costly invasion of Japan projected to cause hundreds of thousands of American casualties based on Okinawa experience. Additional factors included forcing rapid Japanese surrender, demonstrating American power to the Soviet Union, and justifying the massive investment in the Manhattan Project. The bombs on Hiroshima (August 6) and Nagasaki (August 9) killed over 100,000 immediately, with more dying later from radiation.

Ethical Debate

Arguments for use included ending the war quickly, saving lives on both sides that invasion would cost, and Japanese refusal to surrender despite conventional bombing. Arguments against included the targeting of civilians, long-term radiation effects, potential alternatives like demonstration or modified surrender terms, and the precedent of nuclear warfare. This debate continues among historians and ethicists, with no consensus on whether the decision was justified.

Geographer's Lens — US.56 ⌚ ~12 min

Geographers don't just find places — they explain how WHERE shapes WHAT happens. Work these like a geographer. Built on the Five Themes of Geography · C3 Dimension 2 · SSP.06 (spatial reasoning).

THE PLACES — then explain why geography put them there

The atomic bomb was built and used across a handful of secret, far-flung sites. Use the list below to map them, then explain how geography kept the project secret and shaped the war's end.

Place	Where	What happened (given)	Why HERE? (your analysis)
Oak Ridge, Tennessee	East Tennessee	the 'Secret City' — enriched uranium for the bomb	_____
Los Alamos, New Mexico	Desert Southwest	the lab where the bomb was designed (Oppenheimer)	_____
Hanford, Washington	Pacific Northwest	produced plutonium for the 'Fat Man' bomb	_____
Hiroshima, Japan	Japan	first atomic bomb dropped, August 6, 1945	_____
Nagasaki, Japan	Japan	second atomic bomb dropped, August 9, 1945	_____

MOVEMENT & REGION — what's the spatial pattern?

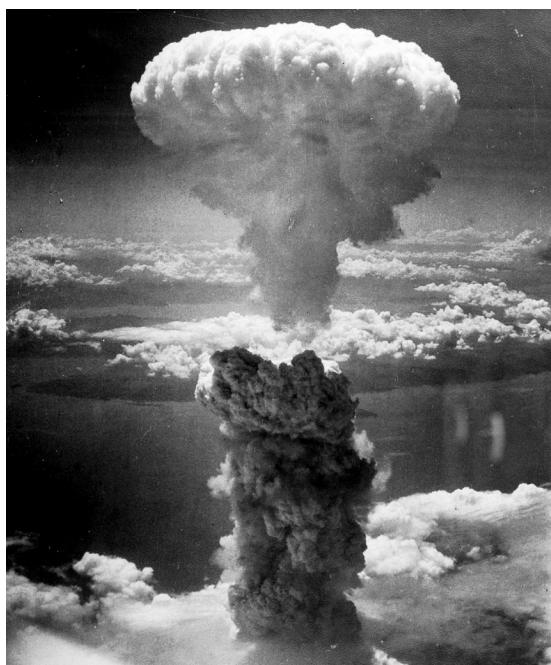

In 1-2 sentences: is this a movement, a cluster, or a whole region? Name the direction or shape it takes on a map.

GEOGRAPHY AS A FORCE — how did location shape the outcome?

How did geography change WHAT happened — who was affected, how far or fast it spread, or who was left out? Use one place above as your evidence.

[DOK 2 · item q-us56-dok2-1 · pre-field-test]

How many people died from the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki?

- A. Over 200,000 people, mostly civilians, died immediately or from radiation effects
- B. Approximately 10,000 military personnel were killed but civilian casualties were minimal
- C. Fewer than 5,000 people were harmed because most residents had already been evacuated
- D. Between 20,000 and 30,000 people died primarily from the initial blast and fires

[DOK 2 · item us-47-q02 · pre-field-test]

President Truman's decision to use atomic bombs against Japan in August 1945 remains one of the most debated decisions in American history. Which of the following best represents the PRIMARY argument Truman's supporters use to justify the decision?

- A. Japan had been the first nation to use chemical weapons in the war, making retaliation justified
- B. A land invasion of Japan would have resulted in massive casualties on both sides; the bomb ended the war more quickly
- C. Japan had refused to surrender unconditionally and was developing its own nuclear weapons program
- D. The Soviet Union had already invaded Japan, and the bomb was needed to stop Soviet expansion

[DOK 3 · item u1-us56-dok3-tc · pre-field-test]

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

Key terms first: Yalta Conference, Potsdam Conference. Read once for the gist, then again for evidence.

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a timeYalta Conference (February 1945)

Roosevelt, Churchill, and Stalin met as Allied victory approached. Major agreements included UN formation plans, division of Germany into occupation zones, and Soviet entry into the war against Japan. Controversially, Stalin promised "free elections" in liberated Eastern Europe—a promise he would break. The conference also addressed reparations from Germany and arrangements for post-war Poland. Roosevelt sought Soviet cooperation for the post-war order.

Potsdam Conference (July-August 1945)

Truman (replacing the deceased Roosevelt), Churchill (replaced mid-conference by Attlee), and Stalin met as Germany surrendered. The conference confirmed occupation zones, issued the Potsdam Declaration ultimatum to Japan demanding unconditional surrender, and agreed on German demilitarization and denazification. Tensions over Eastern Europe and reparations surfaced, revealing the growing divide between Soviet and Western visions for post-war Europe.

Cold War Origins

Disagreements over Eastern Europe proved irreconcilable. Stalin's interpretation of "free elections" meant communist-controlled governments, while the West expected genuine democratic choice. Soviet occupation of Eastern Europe created what Churchill would call the "Iron Curtain." German reparations disputes, with the Soviets stripping their zone of industrial equipment, deepened mistrust. These wartime conferences set the stage for the Cold War division of Europe.

Assessment of Allied Diplomacy

Critics argue Roosevelt conceded too much to Stalin at Yalta, though defenders note Soviet armies already occupied Eastern Europe and FDR sought Soviet help against Japan. Truman took a harder line at Potsdam but faced the same reality of Soviet military control. Whether better outcomes were possible remains debated—the fundamental conflict between Soviet security concerns and Western democratic values may have made Cold War inevitable regardless of conference diplomacy.

★ Tennessee Connection

Cordell Hull of Pickett County, Tennessee, served as Secretary of State (1933-1944) and was instrumental in founding the United Nations. He received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1945 for his role in establishing the UN.

SET YOUR GOAL (self-direction)

My goal for this standard — what will I be able to do, and how will I show it?

HOOK — think before you dig in

Founding of the United Nations & Cordell Hull: Identify and explain the reasons for the founding of the United Nations, including the role of Cordell Hull. Who gained, who was left out — and why does it still matter?

ACTIVATE — what do you already know or wonder?

Think about it, then jot a few notes in your notebook: what do you already know, and what do you wonder about this standard? You will come back to it.

PREVIEW & PREDICT

Which learning target will be hardest, and why? Connect it to the unit's big question: how did the war change America at home and abroad, and who sacrificed even while excluded?

Activity 1 — Vocabulary (Part A: Reference / Word Bank) — US.58 ~10 min

Use this word bank throughout the standard. The Spanish column supports access, not translation of assessment.

PROGRESS CHECK · one question

What were the main goals of the United Nations, and how did they reflect wartime experiences?

- A. The UN had no connection to WWII experiences, although this view has been largely discredited by scholars, but closer analysis reveals a more complicated historical reality, but the historical evidence paints a more nuanced picture
- B. Goals of maintaining peace, promoting human rights, enabling self-determination, and fostering cooperation directly addressed the failures that led to WWII—aggression, human rights violations, and economic nationalism
- C. The UN focused only on trade issues, although this view has been largely discredited by scholars and does not reflect the scholarly consensus on this topic, which ignores significant political and cultural developments of the era
- D. Wartime experiences were irrelevant to UN design, but this fails to account for the broader historical context, which represents a common misconception about this historical period, which contradicts the primary source evidence from this era

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.58 ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

Key terms first: United Nations, Cordell Hull. Read once for the gist, then again for evidence.

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a time

Lessons from League of Nations Failure

The League of Nations failed because the United States never joined, it lacked enforcement mechanisms, major powers could ignore it, and it couldn't prevent aggression by Germany, Italy, and Japan. Planners sought to avoid these weaknesses in a new organization. American participation would be essential, and the new organization needed stronger enforcement authority, particularly through the Security Council with major power veto and potential for military action.

Cordell Hull's Role

Cordell Hull, FDR's Secretary of State and a Tennessean, was instrumental in planning the United Nations. He advocated for international organization throughout the war, led U.S. delegation efforts in preliminary planning, and helped shape UN principles. His decades of work promoting international cooperation earned him the Nobel Peace Prize in 1945, making him one of Tennessee's most significant contributions to world history.

UN Goals and Structure

The United Nations was designed to maintain international peace and security through collective action, develop friendly relations among nations based on equal rights and self-determination, promote social progress and human rights, and facilitate international cooperation on economic and humanitarian issues. The Security Council with five permanent members (US, UK, France, China, USSR) had primary responsibility for peace and security, with veto power ensuring major power buy-in.

UN Legacy and Limitations

The UN successfully avoided the League's fate—American membership was secured, and the organization has survived. However, Cold War rivalry often paralyzed the Security Council through vetoes. The UN has been most effective in humanitarian work, peacekeeping in conflicts where major powers agree, and establishing international norms through declarations and treaties. Its limitations in preventing great power conflicts reflect the inherent challenges of international organization.

Guiding questions

- H — Historical context: What was happening in the world when this was made?
- I — Intended audience: Who was meant to see or obey it?
- P — Purpose: Why did the creator make it? What did they want to happen?
- P — Point of view: Whose side does it show? Whose voice is missing?
- O — Outside connection: What have we studied that connects to this?

SUPPORT OPTION

Sentence frame: This source shows _____ because it _____, which reveals _____.

Model analysis (example)

H: Photographed January 1, 1942, when 26 Allied nations signed the Declaration by United Nations, pledging to fight the Axis together. I: The world public, showing Allied commitment early in the U.S. war effort. P: To formalize the wartime alliance and lay groundwork for a postwar organization. POV: The Allied nations' perspective of unity against the Axis. O: Connects to Cordell Hull's diplomacy and to the 1945 founding of the United Nations.

Try it — sourcing warm-up

Your Tennessee ConnectionTENNESSEE CONNECTION · OAK RIDGE, THE “SECRET CITY”

Tennessee was central to winning — and ending — World War II. In 1942 the federal government built Oak Ridge in the hills of East Tennessee as a secret site of the Manhattan Project (US.56). Its plants enriched the uranium used in the bomb dropped on Hiroshima. The town grew to about 75,000 people almost overnight, yet most workers — including thousands of women (US.52) — had no idea what they were building. Tennessee also sent its people to the war: Fort Campbell trained the 101st Airborne (US.51), Alcoa produced aluminum for warplanes (US.55), and Cordell Hull of Pickett County, Secretary of State, helped found the United Nations and won the Nobel Peace Prize (US.58).

Think Like a Test-Writer (unit review — open to all)

You met a quick “think like a test-writer” prompt in every standard. Here is the full how-to, once, plus room to write your best questions for the whole unit.

HOW TO WRITE A DOK-3 QUESTION

DOK-3 = strategic thinking: the reader must analyze, compare, evaluate, or justify using evidence — and there should be more than one defensible answer (not a fact you can just look up).

Sentence starters: “Why did _____ lead to _____?” · “Which mattered more — _____ or _____ — and why?" · "What is the BEST evidence that _____?" ·

 "Evaluate whether _____." · "Defend or challenge: _____."

Frame: [Analyze / Evaluate / Justify] + [something from this unit] + "using evidence."

Quick check: does my question make the reader THINK and use evidence? If yes, it's DOK-3.

The Good War? — Who Fought, Who Sacrificed, Who Was Excluded

This section complicates the “Good War” narrative: the U.S. fought fascism abroad while denying rights to many of its own people at home. It is History Hack-authored instructional synthesis grounded in this unit’s sourced record — not a primary source.

Serving While Excluded

Black Americans fought under segregation and demanded a “Double V” — victory over fascism abroad and racism at home (US.53); the Tuskegee Airmen, Navajo Code Talkers, and the Japanese-American 442nd (US.51) served with distinction even as their communities faced discrimination.

A Freedom Denied at Home

While fighting for freedom, the U.S. forced about 120,000 Japanese Americans — most of them citizens — into internment camps under Executive Order 9066; the Supreme Court upheld it in Korematsu (US.54).

The Home Front & Women

Rationing, war bonds, and war production remade daily life (US.55); millions of women entered defense work — “Rosie the Riveter” (US.52) — including at Oak Ridge, though many lost those jobs when the war ended.

A New World Order — and the Bomb

The Manhattan Project ended the war with atomic weapons (US.56); Yalta and Potsdam (US.57) divided the postwar world; and the United Nations (US.58) was founded to prevent the next global war — even as the Holocaust (US.47) revealed how far totalitarianism had gone.

Residual note (known follow-up): sourced visuals and named Key-Figure entries for these histories remain pending.

Unit Reflection

Return to the unit’s big question: how did World War II reshape America at home and its role in the world — and who sacrificed for a freedom they were still denied? Write a final claim with two pieces of evidence from different standards.
