Universal Design for Learning · Multi-Tiered System of Supports

EVERY LEARNER · SAME FIRM GOAL

Multiple ways in

Every lesson opens with a real question and a clear “I can” goal, so you know why it matters and where you’re headed.

Multiple ways to see it

Direct instruction, primary sources, maps, and bilingual key vocabulary — the same ideas shown more than one way.

Multiple ways to show it

Model-with-me, sentence frames, and choices in how you respond — you reach the same goal by the route that works for you.

*Your teacher checks your progress along the way and gives you another path if you need one — the goal never lowers.

Check your understanding

How did the "suburban ideal" both fulfill and contradict the American Dream during the 1950s?

- A Suburbs offered homeownership and prosperity for white families, but restrictive covenants and redlining excluded minorities, creating segregated communities that contradicted democratic ideals of equality
- B Suburbs perfectly fulfilled the American Dream for all Americans, though this interpretation lacks supporting historical evidence when examined alongside the available primary and secondary sources
- C Suburban development had no racial dimensions, which does not align with the documented historical record when examined alongside the available primary and secondary sources, although historical sources do not support this conclusion
- D All Americans had equal access to suburban housing, but this fails to account for the broader historical context, which contradicts the primary source evidence from this era and does not reflect the scholarly consensus on this topic
