Universal Design for Learning · Multi-Tiered System of Supports

EVERY LEARNER · SAME FIRM GOAL

Multiple ways in

Every lesson opens with a real question and a clear “I can” goal, so you know why it matters and where you’re headed.

Multiple ways to see it

Direct instruction, primary sources, maps, and bilingual key vocabulary — the same ideas shown more than one way.

Multiple ways to show it

Model-with-me, sentence frames, and choices in how you respond — you reach the same goal by the route that works for you.

Brown v. Board of Education

TN STANDARD

US.78 – Examine the decision and impact of Brown v. Board of Education on desegregation. (TCA)

I CAN

I can examine the decision and impact of Brown v. Board of Education on desegregation.

The NAACP built a legal strategy against segregation — for decades the "separate but equal" doctrine of Plessy v. Ferguson (1896) held; by the 1950s Thurgood Marshall and the NAACP challenged segregated schools, backed by Kenneth Clark's doll tests showing the harm to Black children.

KEY POINT

The NAACP built a legal strategy against segregation — for decades the "separate but equal" doctrine of Plessy v. Ferguson (1896) held; by the 1950s Thurgood Marshall and the NAACP challenged segregated schools, backed by Kenneth Clark's doll tests showing the harm to Black children.

A unanimous Court struck down school segregation — the Supreme Court consolidated five cases; Chief Justice Earl Warren wrote that "separate educational facilities are inherently unequal," violating the 14th Amendment's Equal Protection Clause.

Ending segregation on paper proved slow — Brown II (1955) ordered desegregation "with all deliberate speed"; Southern "massive resistance" meant only 2% of Black Southern students attended integrated schools by 1964, yet Brown anchored the wider movement.

Brown v. Board of Education Decision

Chief Justice Earl Warren · May 17, 1954

"We conclude that, in the field of public education, the doctrine of "separate but equal" has no place. Separate educational facilities are inherently unequal. Therefore, we hold that the plaintiffs and others similarly situated... are, by reason of the segregation complained of, deprived of the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment."

Who benefited?

Who gained land, wealth, power, or protection?

US.78:

Black children and families who won a constitutional ruling against segregated schools, and the broader civil rights movement that gained legal footing.

Who bore the costs?

Who lost land, labor, freedom, or life — and who was silenced?

US.78:

Black students who still faced closed schools, private academies, and years of 'massive resistance' before the ruling was enforced.

Who decided?

Which people, offices, or courts held the authority?

US.78:

The U.S. Supreme Court, which issued the unanimous decision, and Southern officials and states who controlled how quickly it was obeyed.

Brown v. Board of Education

En español: Brown contra el Consejo de Educación

WHAT IT MEANS

The landmark 1954 Supreme Court decision that declared state laws establishing separate public schools for Black and white students unconstitutional, overturning Plessy v. Ferguson and ending legal school...

Clinton 12

En español: Los 12 de Clinton

WHAT IT MEANS

The 12 African American students who integrated Clinton High School in Tennessee in 1956, making it the first state-supported high school in the South to integrate following Brown v. Board of Education.

Little Rock Nine

En español: Los Nueve de Little Rock

WHAT IT MEANS

The nine African American students who integrated Central High School in Little Rock, Arkansas in 1957, facing violent mobs and requiring federal troops protection ordered by President Eisenhower.

Check your understanding

Why was school desegregation so difficult to implement despite the Supreme Court's ruling?

- A Brown II's "all deliberate speed" language allowed gradual implementation while Southern states launched "massive resistance" campaigns
- B The ruling only applied to a few specific school districts, but the historical record tells a more complex story
- C Federal troops refused to enforce the decision, but this fails to account for the broader historical context
- D Most Black families preferred segregated schools, but contemporary accounts suggest a different explanation

Civil Rights Advocates and Opponents

TN STANDARD

US.79 – Examine the roles and actions of civil rights advocates and opponents and how they coincided, confronted, and challenged each other. (TCA)

I CAN

I can examine the roles and actions of civil rights advocates (e.g., Malcolm X, Thurgood Marshall, Rosa Parks) and opponents (e.g., Bull Connor, Orval Faubus, Strom Thurmond) and how they coincided, confronted, and challenged each other.

Advocates led with different strategies — Martin Luther King Jr. organized nonviolent resistance and the SCLC; Malcolm X promoted Black nationalism, then human rights; Thurgood Marshall argued Brown and joined the Supreme Court; Rosa Parks sparked the Montgomery Bus Boycott.

KEY POINT

Advocates led with different strategies — Martin Luther King Jr. organized nonviolent resistance and the SCLC; Malcolm X promoted Black nationalism, then human rights; Thurgood Marshall argued Brown and joined the Supreme Court; Rosa Parks sparked the Montgomery Bus Boycott.

Opponents used office and violence to resist — Bull Connor turned fire hoses and dogs on protesters; Governor Orval Faubus defied court orders at Little Rock; Senator Strom Thurmond led the Dixiecrat revolt and filibustered civil rights legislation for 24+ hours.

KEY POINT

Opponents used office and violence to resist — Bull Connor turned fire hoses and dogs on protesters; Governor Orval Faubus defied court orders at Little Rock; Senator Strom Thurmond led the Dixiecrat revolt and filibustered civil rights legislation for 24+ hours.

Nonviolence and self-defense both shaped the movement — King emphasized integration and nonviolence while Malcolm X first urged separation and self-defense; both evolved, and courtroom victories and mass protests reinforced one another.

Compare the philosophies of Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X regarding integration and Black identity.

- A Both leaders held identical views throughout their careers, which ignores key developments that shaped the outcome and oversimplifies the complex factors at work during this period
- B King emphasized integration through Christian love and nonviolence while Malcolm X initially promoted Black nationalism and self-defense, though both evolved over time
- C Malcolm X always supported King's nonviolent approach, despite limited evidence supporting this interpretation, but contemporary accounts and primary sources suggest otherwise
- D King opposed integration while Malcolm X supported it, though this interpretation lacks supporting historical evidence, and this view has been largely revised by modern historical research

I CAN

I can describe the significant events in the struggle to secure civil rights for African Americans, including the Montgomery Bus Boycott, Freedom Riders, March on Washington, Birmingham bombings, and assassination of Martin Luther King Jr.

Early victories proved nonviolent protest worked — the Montgomery Bus Boycott (1955-1956), sparked by Rosa Parks, sustained 381 days and lifted King to national leadership; the 1960 Nashville sit-ins, led by John Lewis and Diane Nash, desegregated lunch counters.

Tennessee stood at the center of the struggle — Clinton High School (1956) was the first Southern community to integrate under Brown; Highlander Folk School trained Rosa Parks and King; Fayette County's Tent City (1960) sheltered Black sharecroppers evicted for trying to vote.

How did television coverage of events like Birmingham and Little Rock build national support for civil rights legislation?

- A Television had minimal impact on public opinion, despite limited evidence supporting this interpretation, but closer analysis reveals a more complicated historical reality
- B Television coverage primarily supported segregationists, yet the available evidence points to a different conclusion
- C Images of fire hoses, police dogs, and troops protecting children shocked Americans and generated sympathy for the movement, pressuring Congress to act
- D Most Americans did not have access to television coverage, yet the available evidence points to a different conclusion

The Civil Rights Act of 1964 outlawed segregation — it banned discrimination in public accommodations, employment, and federally funded programs, created the EEOC, and ended legal segregation in public facilities.

US.81 · Civil Rights Act of 1964

The Voting Rights Act of 1965 protected the ballot — it banned literacy tests, required federal approval for voting changes in covered areas, and sent federal registrars — lifting Black Southern voter registration from 23% to 61% by 1969.
