Where We Are Headed

Unit 9 • The Civil Rights Movement (1954–1968) — Brown v. Board of Education, the advocates and opponents of civil rights, the boycotts, sit-ins, Freedom Rides, and marches that changed the nation, the landmark civil and voting rights legislation, and the American Indian, Chicano, and Feminist movements that followed the same blueprint Standards build in sequence (US.78 → US.82). Each runs as a full lesson: TN standard • “I Can” • direct instruction • verified primary source • vocabulary • guided + independent practice • TCAP-style check with reveal key.

BELL RINGER · HOOK

In 1954, a unanimous Supreme Court ruled that segregated public schools were unconstitutional — but the law on paper was only the beginning. Over the next fourteen years, ordinary Americans boycotted buses, sat in at lunch counters, rode buses into danger, and marched on Washington, forcing a nation to confront the gap between its ideals and its practice. Congress answered with the most sweeping civil rights laws since Reconstruction.

How did Americans move from a court ruling in 1954 to sweeping federal civil rights laws by 1968 — and what did it take, on the streets and in Congress, to close the gap between the nation's ideals and its practice?

TURN & TALK

With a partner, list three rights or freedoms you think Americans take for granted today — in schools, at the ballot box, or in public places. Then predict: which of these do you think had to be won through protest and law in the 1950s and 1960s? Keep your list; we will return to it at the end of the unit.

What did the Supreme Court decide in Brown v. Board of Education (1954)?

✓ ANSWER

Segregated ('separate but equal') public schools are unconstitutional.

COMMIT FIRST: have everyone answer before the reveal — this is the DOK 1 floor; the graded check later in this lesson moves up to DOK 2–3.

Think About It

In 1954, nine justices of the U.S. Supreme Court agreed unanimously that separating children by race in public schools was unconstitutional — overturning a “separate but equal” doctrine that had stood for 58 years.

DISCUSS

TIMING: Turn & Talk 60 sec → cold-call 2 pairs

If the highest court in the land declared segregated schools illegal in 1954, why did it take years — and federal troops — before many schools actually integrated?

Historical Context Leading to Brown v. Board

- The case emerged from decades of "separate but equal" doctrine established in Plessy v. Ferguson (1896).
- By the 1950s, the NAACP's legal strategy, led by Thurgood Marshall, systematically challenged segregated education.
- Previous cases like Sweatt v. Painter (1950) had already weakened the separate but equal principle in higher education.
- Social science research, including Kenneth Clark's doll tests, demonstrated segregation's psychological harm to Black children.

SENTENCE FRAME (EL & writing support)

In Brown v. Board of Education, the Supreme Court decided that ____, which overturned the earlier rule of ____.

Key Details of the Court Case and Decision

- The Supreme Court consolidated five cases challenging school segregation.
- Chief Justice Earl Warren wrote the unanimous decision stating that "separate educational facilities are inherently unequal" and violated the 14th Amendment's Equal Protection Clause.
- The Court rejected the separate but equal doctrine for public education, declaring that segregation generated feelings of inferiority that damaged Black children's educational opportunities.

Impact on Desegregation

- The decision legally ended school segregation but implementation proved difficult.
- Brown II (1955) ordered desegregation "with all deliberate speed," allowing gradual implementation.
- Many Southern states resisted through "massive resistance" campaigns, creating private academies and closing public schools.
- Progress was slow—by 1964, only 2% of Black Southern students attended integrated schools.
- However, the decision provided legal foundation for the broader civil rights movement.

★ TENNESSEE CONNECTION

Clinton High School in Anderson County, Tennessee, was one of the first public high schools in the South to desegregate, in 1956 — the year after Brown — amid resistance that drew national attention.

September 17, 1957 Library of Congress

Brown v. Board of Education Decision

Close Reading

Chief Justice Earl Warren • May 17, 1954

FSA / U.S. Federal Government, 1939 Library of Congress

"We conclude that, in the field of public education, the doctrine of "separate but equal" has no place. Separate educational facilities are inherently unequal. Therefore, we hold that the plaintiffs and others similarly situated... are, by reason of the segregation complained of, deprived of the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment."

CONTEXT

Since 1896, the Supreme Court's Plessy v. Ferguson decision had enshrined 'separate but equal' as the law of the land, allowing racial segregation across American life. By the early 1950s, the NAACP had built a legal strategy to challenge segregation in court, leading to the Brown v. Board case combining lawsuits from five states. The unanimous 1954 ruling overturned Plessy and declared school segregation inherently unequal—but it did not end segregation overnight, as resistance in the South was fierce.

DISCUSS

TIMING: Turn & Talk 60 sec → cold-call 2 pairs

When people share the same goal but disagree on how to reach it, does that division weaken a movement — or does it give the movement more ways to win?

Civil Rights Advocates

- Martin Luther King Jr. led nonviolent resistance, organized the Montgomery Bus Boycott, founded the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), and delivered the "I Have a Dream" speech.
- Malcolm X initially promoted Black nationalism through the Nation of Islam, later evolving toward human rights after his pilgrimage to Mecca.
- Thurgood Marshall served as NAACP chief legal counsel, argued Brown v. Board, and became the first Black Supreme Court Justice.
- Rosa Parks sparked the Montgomery Bus Boycott and became a symbol of quiet dignity and resistance.

SENTENCE FRAME (EL & writing support)

Civil rights advocates like ___ used the strategy of ___, while opponents like ___ tried to ___.

Civil Rights Opponents

- Bull Connor, Birmingham Police Commissioner, used fire hoses and police dogs against peaceful protesters—his violent tactics backfired by generating sympathy for civil rights.
- Orval Faubus, Arkansas Governor, defied federal court orders using the National Guard to prevent the Little Rock Nine from entering Central High School, forcing President Eisenhower to intervene.
- Strom Thurmond, South Carolina Senator, led the "Dixiecrat" revolt in 1948 and conducted the longest individual Senate filibuster (24+ hours) against the 1957 Civil Rights Act.

Comparing Approaches

- King emphasized integration and nonviolence while Malcolm X initially promoted separation and self-defense.
- Both evolved—King became more critical of economic inequality while Malcolm X moved toward a broader human rights perspective.
- Marshall used the courts while King used mass protests; both strategies complemented each other.
- Legal victories provided the framework while protests generated political pressure for change.

The Ballot or the Bullet

Malcolm X · April 3, 1964

"It'll be the ballot or the bullet. It'll be liberty or it'll be death. And if you're not ready to pay that price don't use the word freedom in your vocabulary... I'm not an American. I'm one of the 22 million Black people who are the victims of Americanism... I don't see any American dream; I see an American nightmare."

READ CLOSELY Underline the exact words that answer the ANALYZE question — be ready to read them aloud.

Argumentation

CONTEXT

Malcolm X delivered 'The Ballot or the Bullet' speech in April 1964, just as the Civil Rights Act was being debated in Congress. His speech represented a different tradition in African American political thought —Black nationalism and self-defense—in contrast to King's nonviolent integration strategy. Malcolm X had recently left the Nation of Islam and was developing a more politically focused philosophy. His challenge to the American system was more radical than King's appeal to its ideals.

ANALYZE

How does Malcolm X's view of the civil rights struggle differ from nonviolent approaches?

Boycotts, sit-ins, Freedom Rides, and marches were all different tactics. What did each one accomplish that the others could not?

Early Movement Victories

- The Montgomery Bus Boycott (1955-1956), sparked by Rosa Parks' arrest, demonstrated Black economic power through 381 days of sustained action.
- It established nonviolent resistance as the primary strategy and elevated Martin Luther King Jr. to national leadership.
- The Nashville Sit-ins (1960), led by John Lewis and Diane Nash, used disciplined nonviolent protests to desegregate lunch counters, inspiring similar actions nationwide.

★ TENNESSEE CONNECTION

The Nashville sit-ins (1960) — among these early movement victories — were led by Fisk and American Baptist students trained at Highlander Folk School in Monteagle, Tennessee. Their disciplined nonviolence made Nashville the first major Southern city to begin desegregating its downtown lunch counters.

Tennessee's Role in the Movement

- Clinton High School (1956) became the first Southern community to integrate its high school following Brown v. Board.
- Twelve Black students faced violent opposition, requiring National Guard protection.
- Highlander Folk School trained civil rights leaders including Rosa Parks and King in nonviolent resistance.
- Tent City in Fayette County (1960) formed when Black sharecroppers evicted for attempting to vote created a community on donated land, demonstrating both retaliation and resilience.

★ TENNESSEE CONNECTION

The Nashville sit-ins of 1960, led by Fisk University students including Diane Nash and John Lewis, desegregated Nashville's downtown lunch counters and became a national model for nonviolent protest. In Fayette County, Tennessee, evicted Black sharecroppers who registered to vote built 'Tent City' to survive.

Confrontations That Changed America

- The Little Rock Nine (1957) faced Governor Faubus's defiance until President Eisenhower sent federal troops.
- Freedom Riders (1961) tested desegregation rulings by riding buses through the South, facing firebombings and beatings that forced federal intervention.
- The Birmingham Campaign (1963) targeted "the most segregated city in America," where Bull Connor's violent response to peaceful protesters shocked the nation.

U.S. National Park Service, May 14, 1961 Wikimedia Commons

Culminating Events

- The March on Washington (1963) brought 250,000 people to hear King's "I Have a Dream" speech, pressuring Congress for legislation.
- Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination in Memphis (1968) while supporting striking sanitation workers triggered nationwide riots and galvanized support for the Fair Housing Act, marking both the movement's peak and transformation.

★ TENNESSEE CONNECTION

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated in Memphis, Tennessee, on April 4, 1968, where he had come to support striking sanitation workers — placing the movement's tragic turning point on Tennessee soil.

"Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere. We are caught in an inescapable network of mutuality, tied in a single garment of destiny. Whatever affects one directly, affects all indirectly... I have almost reached the regrettable conclusion that the Negro's great stumbling block in his stride toward freedom is not the White Citizen's Council or the Ku Klux Klanner, but the white moderate."

CONTEXT

Dr. King wrote his famous letter in April 1963 from a Birmingham jail cell, where he had been imprisoned for violating an injunction against demonstrations. The letter was a response to a statement by eight white Alabama clergymen who had called the demonstrations 'unwise and untimely' while expressing sympathy for the civil rights cause. King's letter became one of the most eloquent defenses of nonviolent direct action and the moral urgency of civil rights in American history.

YOUR TASK

Using your Cornell notes, complete the SAPA chart (Situation — Action — Problem — Action) for THREE civil rights campaigns from this standard: choose from the Montgomery Bus Boycott, the Nashville sit-ins, the Freedom Rides, and the March on Washington. For each, identify the Situation (the injustice), the Action taken (the tactic), the Problem/resistance it met, and the further Action or outcome that resulted. Note Tennessee's role where it applies (Nashville sit-ins, Highlander, Fayette County Tent City).

DELIVERABLE

DISCUSS

TIMING: Turn & Talk 60 sec → cold-call 2 pairs

Protests can change hearts and headlines — but why does lasting change usually require an act of Congress or an amendment to the Constitution?

Civil Rights Act of 1964

- This landmark legislation banned discrimination in public accommodations, employment, and federally funded programs.
- It created the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) and strengthened voting rights enforcement.
- The Act ended legal segregation in public facilities and opened economic opportunities for minorities, though housing discrimination and voting restrictions remained challenges.

SENTENCE FRAME (EL & writing support)

The ___ of ___ helped African Americans by ___, which the government could now enforce because ___.

Voting Rights Act of 1965

- The Voting Rights Act banned literacy tests and other discriminatory voting practices.
- It required federal approval for voting changes in covered jurisdictions and authorized federal voting registrars in areas with low minority registration.
- The impact was dramatic—Black voter registration in the South increased from 23% to 61% by 1969, transforming Southern politics.

Yoichi R. Okamoto, LBJ Library, August 6, 1965 Wikimedia Commons

Civil Rights Act of 1968 (Fair Housing Act)

- Passed after King's assassination amid national grief and urban riots, this Act prohibited discrimination in housing sales, rentals, and financing based on race, religion, national origin, or sex.
- It addressed residential segregation, though enforcement remained weak.
- The Act completed the legal framework for civil rights protection.

24th Amendment (1964)

- This constitutional amendment eliminated poll taxes in federal elections, removing economic barriers to voting that particularly affected poor Black and white voters in the South.
- It extended voting rights protection beyond racial discrimination to address economic discrimination in the electoral process.

- Cesar Chavez organized the United Farm Workers, using nonviolent tactics including strikes and boycotts to demand equal opportunities in employment and education.

Feminist Movement

- The feminist movement pursued equal pay, reproductive rights, political representation, and ending gender discrimination.
- Key actions included formation of the National Organization for Women (NOW), consciousness-raising groups, and protests against discriminatory practices.
- Betty Friedan wrote "The Feminine Mystique" (1963), co-founded NOW, and challenged traditional gender roles, using civil rights legal strategies and protest tactics.

Unit 9 Complete

The Civil Rights Movement (1954–1968) · from Brown v. Board of Education, through the advocates and opponents of civil rights and the boycotts, sit-ins, Freedom Rides, and marches, to the landmark civil and voting rights legislation and the American Indian, Chicano, and Feminist movements that followed.

Revisit your unit hook: How did Americans move from a court ruling in 1954 to sweeping federal civil rights laws by 1968 — and what did it take to close the gap between the nation's ideals and its practice? You can now answer with evidence — from Brown v. Board and the strategies of King, Malcolm X, Marshall, and Parks, through Montgomery, the Nashville sit-ins, the Freedom Rides, and the March on Washington, to the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Voting Rights Act of 1965, and the movements that expanded the meaning of civil rights.

Check your understanding

Compare how these movements both built upon and differed from the African American Civil Rights Movement.

- A They adopted similar tactics (protests, legal challenges, legislation) but pursued distinct goals reflecting their communities' unique experiences and cultural identities ✓ KEY
- B These movements were completely unrelated to civil rights, although historical sources do not support this conclusion and oversimplifies the complex factors at work during this period
- C They opposed the African American civil rights movement, but the historical record tells a more complex story, which ignores significant political and cultural developments of the era
- D They were identical in every way to the civil rights movement, despite limited evidence supporting this interpretation and fails to account for key developments in the broader context
