TENNESSEE CONNECTION • NASHVILLE, HIGHLANDER & MEMPHIS

Tennessee was at the heart of the civil rights movement. The Highlander Folk School in Monteagle trained leaders including Rosa Parks and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. (US.79). In 1960, Fisk University students — among them Diane Nash and John Lewis — led the disciplined Nashville sit-ins that desegregated the city's lunch counters (US.80). And in 1968, Dr. King came to Memphis to support striking sanitation workers, where he was assassinated at the Lorraine Motel (US.80).

One common workbook designed for learner variability. Every student works toward the same Tennessee standards; supports vary the means, not the goal or the ceiling.

Summary — In your own words (2–3 sentences)

PROGRESS CHECK • one question

Why was school desegregation so difficult to implement despite the Supreme Court's ruling?

- A. Brown II's "all deliberate speed" language allowed gradual implementation while Southern states launched "massive resistance" campaigns
- B. The ruling only applied to a few specific school districts, but the historical record tells a more complex story
- C. Federal troops refused to enforce the decision, but this fails to account for the broader historical context
- D. Most Black families preferred segregated schools, but contemporary accounts suggest a different explanation

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.78 ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a time

Historical Context Leading to Brown v. Board

The case emerged from decades of "separate but equal" doctrine established in Plessy v. Ferguson (1896). By the 1950s, the NAACP's legal strategy, led by Thurgood Marshall, systematically challenged segregated education. Previous cases like Sweatt v. Painter (1950) had already weakened the separate but equal principle in higher education. Social science research, including Kenneth Clark's doll tests, demonstrated segregation's psychological harm to Black children.

Key Details of the Court Case and Decision

The Supreme Court consolidated five cases challenging school segregation. Chief Justice Earl Warren wrote the unanimous decision stating that "separate educational facilities are inherently unequal" and violated the 14th Amendment's Equal Protection Clause. The Court rejected the separate but equal doctrine for public education, declaring that segregation generated feelings of inferiority that damaged Black children's educational opportunities.

Impact on Desegregation

The decision legally ended school segregation but implementation proved difficult. Brown II (1955) ordered desegregation "with all deliberate speed," allowing gradual implementation. Many Southern states resisted through "massive resistance" campaigns, creating private academies and closing public schools. Progress was slow—by 1964, only 2% of Black Southern students attended integrated schools. However, the decision provided legal foundation for the broader civil rights movement.

[DOK 2 • item us78-q2 • pre-field-test]

How did the Supreme Court's decision in Brown v. Board overturn Plessy v. Ferguson?

- A. It ruled that "separate educational facilities are inherently unequal," rejecting the separate but equal doctrine for public education
- B. It declared all forms of segregation unconstitutional immediately, yet the available evidence points to a different conclusion
- C. It upheld Plessy but made exceptions for public schools, despite the fact that multiple sources contradict this view
- D. It delegated the decision to individual states, which ignores key developments that shaped the outcome

[DOK 2 • item us-78-x046 • pre-field-test]

Which statement best describes the long-term significance of Brown v. Board of Education for the civil rights movement?

- A. It immediately ended segregation in all public facilities across the South
- B. It established a legal and moral foundation that activists used to challenge broader racial discrimination
- C. It persuaded most Southern whites to voluntarily accept school integration by 1960
- D. It gave the president unlimited power to enforce civil rights laws without congressional approval

[DOK 3 • item u1-us78-dok3-tc • pre-field-test]

Why was school desegregation so difficult to implement despite the Supreme Court's ruling?

- A. Brown II's "all deliberate speed" language allowed gradual implementation while Southern states launched "massive resistance" campaigns
- B. The ruling only applied to a few specific school districts, but the historical record tells a more complex story

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.79 ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a time

Civil Rights Advocates

Martin Luther King Jr. led nonviolent resistance, organized the Montgomery Bus Boycott, founded the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), and delivered the "I Have a Dream" speech. Malcolm X initially promoted Black nationalism through the Nation of Islam, later evolving toward human rights after his pilgrimage to Mecca. Thurgood Marshall served as NAACP chief legal counsel, argued Brown v. Board, and became the first Black Supreme Court Justice. Rosa Parks sparked the Montgomery Bus Boycott and became a symbol of quiet dignity and resistance.

Civil Rights Opponents

Bull Connor, Birmingham Police Commissioner, used fire hoses and police dogs against peaceful protesters—his violent tactics backfired by generating sympathy for civil rights. Orval Faubus, Arkansas Governor, defied federal court orders using the National Guard to prevent the Little Rock Nine from entering Central High School, forcing President Eisenhower to intervene. Strom Thurmond, South Carolina Senator, led the "Dixiecrat" revolt in 1948 and conducted the longest individual Senate filibuster (24+ hours) against the 1957 Civil Rights Act.

Comparing Approaches

King emphasized integration and nonviolence while Malcolm X initially promoted separation and self-defense. Both evolved—King became more critical of economic inequality while Malcolm X moved toward a broader human rights perspective. Marshall used the courts while King used mass protests; both strategies complemented each other. Legal victories provided the framework while protests generated political pressure for change.

EXIT TICKET — before you leave [item us79-q1 • DOK 2 • pre-field-test]

How did civil rights leaders like King, Malcolm X, Marshall, and Parks use different strategies to advance equality?

- A. They all used identical nonviolent protest methods, despite the fact that multiple sources contradict this view, which does not align with the documented historical record
- B. They worked exclusively through congressional lobbying, but this oversimplifies the complex factors at work, though this interpretation lacks supporting historical evidence
- C. Each leader focused only on their local community, which does not align with the documented historical record and oversimplifies the complex factors at work during this period
- D. King used nonviolent protest, Malcolm X promoted Black nationalism, Marshall used legal challenges, and Parks became a symbol through individual resistance

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.80 ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a time

Early Movement Victories

The Montgomery Bus Boycott (1955-1956), sparked by Rosa Parks' arrest, demonstrated Black economic power through 381 days of sustained action. It established nonviolent resistance as the primary strategy and elevated Martin Luther King Jr. to national leadership. The Nashville Sit-ins (1960), led by John Lewis and Diane Nash, used disciplined nonviolent protests to desegregate lunch counters, inspiring similar actions nationwide.

Tennessee's Role in the Movement

Clinton High School (1956) became the first Southern community to integrate its high school following Brown v. Board. Twelve Black students faced violent opposition, requiring National Guard protection. Highlander Folk School trained civil rights leaders including Rosa Parks and King in nonviolent resistance. Tent City in Fayette County (1960) formed when Black sharecroppers evicted for attempting to vote created a community on donated land, demonstrating both retaliation and resilience.

Confrontations That Changed America

The Little Rock Nine (1957) faced Governor Faubus's defiance until President Eisenhower sent federal troops. Freedom Riders (1961) tested desegregation rulings by riding buses through the South, facing firebombings and beatings that forced federal intervention. The Birmingham Campaign (1963) targeted "the most segregated city in America," where Bull Connor's violent response to peaceful protesters shocked the nation.

Culminating Events

The March on Washington (1963) brought 250,000 people to hear King's "I Have a Dream" speech, pressuring Congress for legislation. Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination in Memphis (1968) while supporting striking sanitation workers triggered nationwide riots and galvanized support for the Fair Housing Act, marking both the movement's peak and transformation.

Geographer's Lens — US.80 ~12 min

Geographers don't just find places — they explain how WHERE shapes WHAT happens. Work these like a geographer. Built on the Five Themes of Geography • C3 Dimension 2 • SSP.06 (spatial reasoning).

THE PLACES — then explain why geography put them there

The civil rights movement unfolded city by city across the South. Use the list below to map the key events, then explain why the movement targeted these particular places.

Place	Where	What happened (given)	Why HERE? (your analysis)
Montgomery, Alabama	Deep South	1955–56 bus boycott sparked by Rosa Parks; MLK emerges
Little Rock, Arkansas	Upper South	1957 — federal troops escort the 'Little Rock Nine' into Central High
Nashville, Tennessee	Tennessee	1960 lunch-counter sit-ins led by Diane Nash and John Lewis
Birmingham, Alabama	Deep South	1963 campaign; the children's march and police violence shock the nation
Selma, Alabama	Deep South	1965 voting-rights march ('Bloody Sunday') to Montgomery
Memphis, Tennessee	Tennessee	1968 sanitation strike; Dr. King assassinated at the Lorraine Motel

MOVEMENT & REGION — what's the spatial pattern?

In 1–2 sentences: is this a movement, a cluster, or a whole region? Name the direction or shape it takes on a map.

GEOGRAPHY AS A FORCE — how did location shape the outcome?

How did geography change WHAT happened — who was affected, how far or fast it spread, or who was left out? Use one place above as your evidence.

Civil Rights Act of 1964

This landmark legislation banned discrimination in public accommodations, employment, and federally funded programs. It created the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) and strengthened voting rights enforcement. The Act ended legal segregation in public facilities and opened economic opportunities for minorities, though housing discrimination and voting restrictions remained challenges.

Voting Rights Act of 1965

The Voting Rights Act banned literacy tests and other discriminatory voting practices. It required federal approval for voting changes in covered jurisdictions and authorized federal voting registrars in areas with low minority registration. The impact was dramatic—Black voter registration in the South increased from 23% to 61% by 1969, transforming Southern politics.

Civil Rights Act of 1968 (Fair Housing Act)

Passed after King's assassination amid national grief and urban riots, this Act prohibited discrimination in housing sales, rentals, and financing based on race, religion, national origin, or sex. It addressed residential segregation, though enforcement remained weak. The Act completed the legal framework for civil rights protection.

24th Amendment (1964)

This constitutional amendment eliminated poll taxes in federal elections, removing economic barriers to voting that particularly affected poor Black and white voters in the South. It extended voting rights protection beyond racial discrimination to address economic discrimination in the electoral process.

Standard US.82 — American Indian, Chicano & Feminist Movements

TN Academic Standard US.82: Analyze how the American Indian Movement, Chicano Movement, and Feminist Movement are related to the Civil Rights Movement in advancing equality across the broader spectrum of American society during this time period.

LEARNING TARGETS — I can...

- I can analyze how the American Indian Movement, Chicano Movement, and Feminist Movement are related to the Civil Rights Movement in advancing equality across American society.

Lenses for this standard: Culture • History

CORE PATH — the same for every student

Same rigor for everyone: analyze the sources and vocabulary, then show what you learned on the Practice Quiz and the CER.

UDL and MTSS give you flexible ways in — they never lower the bar.

Check yourself against the learning targets on the Cornell Notes page.

★ Tennessee Connection

Tennessee had its own dimensions of the broader social movements. The Highlander Folk School in Monteagle trained activists across movements. Wilma Mankiller, who became the first female Principal Chief of the Cherokee Nation, spent her early life connected to the Cherokee's Tennessee heritage before relocation.

SET YOUR GOAL (self-direction)

My goal for this standard — what will I be able to do, and how will I show it?

HOOK — think before you dig in American Indian, Chicano & Feminist Movements: Analyze how the American Indian Movement, Chicano Movement, and Feminist Movement are related to the Civil Rights Movement in advancing equality across the broader spectrum of American society during this time period. Who gained, who was left out — and why does it still matter?

ACTIVATE — what do you already know or wonder?

Jot what you already know or want to find out about this standard. You'll come back to it.

PREVIEW & PREDICT

Which learning target will be hardest, and why? Connect it to the unit's big question: how did people change the law and the nation, and what did it cost?

Activity 1 — Vocabulary (Part A: Reference / Word Bank) — US.82 ~10 min

Use this word bank throughout the standard. The Spanish column supports access, not translation of assessment.

Term	Student-friendly meaning	Spanish
American Indian Movement (AIM)	Civil rights organization founded in 1968 to address issues of poverty, police brutality, and treaty rights affecting Native Americans, using tactics inspired by the Black civil rights movement.	Movimiento Indio Americano
Chicano Movement	Mexican American civil rights movement of the 1960s-70s that fought for labor rights, education reform, political representation, and cultural pride, led by figures like Cesar Chavez.	Movimiento Chicano
Feminist Movement (1960s)	The "Second Wave" women's rights movement that fought for equal pay, reproductive rights, workplace equality, and passage of the Equal Rights Amendment, led by activists like Betty Friedan.	Movimiento Feminista (1960s)

LANGUAGE SUPPORT

Use the Spanish column in the Word Bank above to access these terms — cognates and translations support understanding, not translation of assessment.

Summary — In your own words (2–3 sentences)

PROGRESS CHECK • one question

Compare how these movements both built upon and differed from the African American Civil Rights Movement.

- A. They adopted similar tactics (protests, legal challenges, legislation) but pursued distinct goals reflecting their communities' unique experiences and cultural identities
- B. These movements were completely unrelated to civil rights, although historical sources do not support this conclusion and oversimplifies the complex factors at work during this period
- C. They opposed the African American civil rights movement, but the historical record tells a more complex story, which ignores significant political and cultural developments of the era
- D. They were identical in every way to the civil rights movement, despite limited evidence supporting this interpretation and fails to account for key developments in the broader context

Commit before you move on — mark it, say it, or explain it aloud.

Activity 4 — Close Read — US.82 ~15 min

Reading type: History Hack-authored instructional synthesis. This is not a primary source. Builds SSP.03 (synthesize) and SSP.05 (historical awareness).

CORE PATH — read one chunk at a time

American Indian Movement (AIM)

AIM pursued tribal sovereignty, treaty rights, cultural preservation, and economic development on reservations. Key actions included the Occupation of Alcatraz (1969-1971), Trail of Broken Treaties march (1972), and Wounded Knee occupation (1973). Leader Russell Means advocated for "Red Power" and challenged federal Indian policies, using tactics similar to the civil rights movement while asserting distinct cultural identity.

Chicano Movement

The Chicano Movement sought educational equality, labor rights, political representation, and cultural pride for Mexican Americans. Key actions included East L.A. school walkouts (1968), formation of La Raza Unida Party, and grape boycotts. Cesar Chavez organized the United Farm Workers, using nonviolent tactics including strikes and boycotts to demand equal opportunities in employment and education.

Feminist Movement

The feminist movement pursued equal pay, reproductive rights, political representation, and ending gender discrimination. Key actions included formation of the National Organization for Women (NOW), consciousness-raising groups, and protests against discriminatory practices. Betty Friedan wrote "The Feminine Mystique" (1963), co-founded NOW, and challenged traditional gender roles, using civil rights legal strategies and protest tactics.

Synthesizing Connections

All movements shared common elements: legal strategies to challenge discriminatory laws, direct action through protests and demonstrations, pursuit of protective federal legislation, emphasis on group pride and cultural distinctiveness, coalition building with other movements, and strategic use of media. These movements collectively expanded civil rights from racial equality to broader concepts of human equality, creating templates for future social justice movements.

Key terms first: American Indian Movement (AIM), Chicano Movement. Read once for the gist, then again for evidence.

CLOSE-READ EVIDENCE LAB — for each question: quote the EVIDENCE from the passage above, then write YOUR ANSWER (or answer aloud / diagram it).

Text-dependent question	Evidence from the passage	Your answer (what it shows)
What is the main idea of the "American Indian Movement (AIM)" section, and what evidence supports it?

[DOK 2 • item us82-q2 • pre-field-test]

What specific goals did leaders like Russell Means, Cesar Chavez, and Betty Friedan pursue for their communities?

- A. Means sought tribal sovereignty and treaty rights, Chavez fought for farm worker labor rights, and Friedan demanded gender equality and an end to discrimination
- B. They all pursued identical goals, but this oversimplifies the complex factors at work, but the historical evidence paints a more nuanced picture
- C. They focused exclusively on voting rights, but the historical record tells a more complex story when examined alongside the available primary and secondary sources
- D. They avoided political activism entirely, but the historical record tells a more complex story and fails to account for key developments in the broader context

[DOK 2 • item q-us82-4 • pre-field-test]

How were the American Indian, Chicano, and Feminist movements related to the Civil Rights Movement?

- A. They competed with the movement for federal resources
- B. They drew inspiration from civil rights tactics and strategies
- C. They focused exclusively on regional rather than national issues
- D. They operated independently with no shared methods

[DOK 3 • item u1-us82-dok3-tc • pre-field-test]

Compare how these movements both built upon and differed from the African American Civil Rights Movement.

- A. They adopted similar tactics (protests, legal challenges, legislation) but pursued distinct goals reflecting their communities' unique experiences and cultural identities
- B. These movements were completely unrelated to civil rights, although historical sources do not support this conclusion and oversimplifies the complex factors at work during this period

EXIT TICKET — before you leave [item us82-q1 • DOK 2 • pre-field-test]

How did the American Indian Movement, Chicano Movement, and Feminist Movement adopt civil rights strategies for their own causes?

- A. They rejected all civil rights tactics, but this oversimplifies the complex factors at work, which ignores significant political and cultural developments of the era
- B. They only used violent resistance, although this view has been largely discredited by scholars, though this interpretation lacks supporting historical evidence
- C. They adapted legal challenges, direct action protests, media strategies, and legislative campaigns used by the African American civil rights movement
- D. They worked exclusively through electoral politics, although this view has been largely discredited by scholars, but the historical evidence paints a more nuanced picture

Your Tennessee Connection

TENNESSEE CONNECTION • TENNESSEE AT THE HEART OF THE MOVEMENT

Few states were more central to the civil rights movement than Tennessee. In the mountains at Monteagle, the Highlander Folk School trained a generation of activists — Rosa Parks attended just months before the Montgomery bus boycott, and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. spoke there (US.79, US.82). In Nashville, Fisk and other students led by Diane Nash and John Lewis ran the 1960 lunch-counter sit-ins with strict nonviolent discipline, making the city a national model and launching leaders of the wider movement (US.80). Tennessee schools desegregated unevenly after Brown, with Clinton among the first (US.78). And in April 1968, Dr. King traveled to Memphis to stand with striking sanitation workers — “I AM A MAN” — where he delivered his final “Mountaintop” speech and was assassinated at the Lorraine Motel (US.80–US.81).

Reflect (RESPONSE CHOICE): How does a local story change the way you understand a national event? Answer by writing, recording, or diagramming.

Local History Investigation

Industrialization touched Tennessee too — railroads, mines, mills, and the people who worked them. Investigate one local connection and record what you find.

US.78: Using this standard, take a position on the central question — examine the decision and impact of Brown v. Board of Education on desegregation? Support your claim with two pieces of evidence from the passage and explain your reasoning.

US.79: Using this standard, take a position on the central question — examine the roles and actions of civil rights advocates (e.g., Malcolm X, Thurgood Marshall, Rosa Parks) and opponents (e.g., Bull Connor, Orval Faubus, Strom Thurmond) and how they coincided, confronted, and challenged each other? Support your claim with two pieces of evidence from the passage and explain your reasoning.

US.80: Using this standard, take a position on the central question — describe the significant events in the struggle to secure civil rights for African Americans, including the Montgomery Bus Boycott, Freedom Riders, March on Washington, Birmingham bombings, and assassination of Martin Luther King Jr? Support your claim with two pieces of evidence from the passage and explain your reasoning.

US.81: Using this standard, take a position on the central question — analyze civil and voting rights legislation, including the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Voting Rights Act of 1965, the Civil Rights Act of 1968 (Fair Housing Act), and the 24th Amendment? Support your claim with two pieces of evidence from the passage and explain your reasoning.

US.82: Using this standard, take a position on the central question — analyze how the American Indian Movement, Chicano Movement, and Feminist Movement are related to the Civil Rights Movement in advancing equality across American society? Support your claim with two pieces of evidence from the passage and explain your reasoning.

Think Like a Test-Writer (unit review — open to all)

You met a quick “think like a test-writer” prompt in every standard. Here is the full how-to, once, plus room to write your best questions for the whole unit.

HOW TO WRITE A DOK-3 QUESTION

DOK-3 = strategic thinking: the reader must analyze, compare, evaluate, or justify using evidence — and there should be more than one defensible answer (not a fact you can just look up).

Sentence starters: “Why did _____ lead to _____?” • “Which mattered more — _____ or _____ — and why?” • “What is the BEST evidence that _____?” • “Evaluate whether _____.” • “Defend or challenge: _____.”

Frame: [Analyze / Evaluate / Justify] + [something from this unit] + “using evidence.”

Quick check: does my question make the reader THINK and use evidence? If yes, it’s DOK-3.

Making Equality Real — Many Movements, Many Methods

This section connects the threads of the era: the fight to make the promise of equality real took many movements and many methods — courts, marches, laws, and grassroots organizing. It is History Hack-authored instructional synthesis grounded in this unit’s sourced record — not a primary source.

Winning in the Courts

The NAACP’s long legal campaign overturned “separate but equal” in Brown v. Board of Education (US.78), declaring segregated schools unconstitutional and giving the movement a legal foundation — though enforcement was slow and fiercely resisted.

Winning in the Streets

Ordinary people forced change through nonviolent direct action (US.79–US.80): the Montgomery bus boycott, the Nashville and Greensboro sit-ins, the Freedom Rides, Birmingham, and the March on Washington built pressure the nation could not ignore.

Winning in the Law

That pressure produced landmark legislation (US.81): the Civil Rights Act of 1964 outlawed segregation and job discrimination, and the Voting Rights Act of 1965 struck down the barriers that had denied Black Southerners the ballot.

A Wider Struggle

The movement inspired others (US.82): the American Indian Movement, the Chicano movement and the United Farm Workers, and a revived women’s movement all pressed the country to widen the meaning of equality.

Residual note (known follow-up): sourced visuals and named Key-Figure entries for these histories remain pending.

Unit Reflection

Return to the unit’s big question: how did Americans fight to make the promise of equality real — and what did it take to change the law and the nation? Write a final claim with two pieces of evidence from different standards.
